Time

11.00am to 3.00pm

Venue

London venue to be confirmed

Chaired by Mike Hill, news journalism course director, Cardiff University

This forum is for heads of journalism or course leaders delivering NCTJ-accredited postgraduate journalism courses. It provides an opportunity to network and discuss journalism training matters within the context of a postgraduate university programme.

Aims and objectives

Delegates attending the forum will be encouraged to share ideas and issues. We will be discussing the NCTJ's strategy, apprenticeships, progress with online exams, developments to qualifications, awards, and the new approach to accreditation. We would also like your views on safeguarding and training for reporting terror and trauma.

Who should attend?

This forum has been designed exclusively for either heads of journalism or course leaders at those universities offering NCTJ-accredited postgraduate programmes. Places are limited to one representative per course. We believe that it is important that all accredited MA/PgDip courses are represented at the forum so if the head of journalism and course leader are unable to attend, please make every effort to send another delegate.
